Who is most likely to get very sick from COVID-19?

- Older adults
- People who have serious chronic medical conditions like heart disease, diabetes, and lung disease

If you are an older adult or have a long-term health problem, you are more likely to get very sick from COVID-19. It is especially important to take actions to stay healthy.

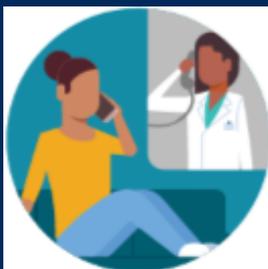

What actions can you take now to reduce your risk of getting sick?

- During a COVID-19 outbreak in your community, stay home as much as possible.
- It is okay to go for walks in your neighborhood or spend time gardening in your yard but try to limit contact with others.
- Keep space between yourself and others and avoid crowds.
- Stay in touch with friends and family by phone, email, or social media.

- Contact your healthcare provider to get extra of any needed prescription medications. You could also sign up to get your medicines delivered to your home through many pharmacies.
- Have over-the-counter medicines and supplies, like Tylenol and tissues, to treat any mild illness at home.
- Have enough household items and groceries on hand to stay home if you need to. If you need anything, ask family members or neighbors to get items from the store for you.

- Wash your hands often with soap and water for at least 20 seconds, especially after blowing your nose, coughing, sneezing, or after being in a public place.
- If you are unable to wash your hands, use hand sanitizer with at least 60% alcohol.
- Try not to touch your face with unwashed hands.

If you develop a fever, cough, or have trouble breathing (COVID-19 symptoms) that cannot be managed at home, contact your healthcare provider for instructions.

Only go to the ER if it is an emergency.
